Pink Warrior Angels of Texas is driven on providing direct support to those that have been diagnosed with cancer. We have a belief that no one should be left to fight alone. We act on our own personal experiences and by providing resources, financial assistance, and emotional support to warriors through our angel/warrior program.

From the moment someone is diagnosed, their entire life can be flipped inside out and though they may not realize it at first, seeking support through those that have experienced and conquered their own similar battles with cancer, is something we strongly believe to be invaluable.

While it may be difficult to acknowledge, Pink Warrior Angels of Texas encourages warriors to seek that support in a more personal way by providing them with an angel. Though our friends and family can be an amazing support system, they don't truly understand the challenges one may face emotionally and physically. This is something we believe can only be fully understood when you have experienced a cancer diagnosis. An Angel knows what it feels like to lose their hair, to face the fears and challenges of that first chemotherapy or radiation treatment, and to cope with the side effects. The life-long bonds that are created through the warrior/angel program are so meaningful and important for the well-being of warriors to carry them through the toughest times.

Watching the bonds form between Angels and Warriors and knowing that we are helping them through one of the most difficult times in their life, is truly humbling. There is something to be said when you know that no one has to feel alone in their battle.
